

Edward D. Breen is chairman and chief executive officer of Tyco International. Breen has been chairman and CEO of Tyco since July 2002 after serving as president and COO of Motorola, Inc.

He began his career at Motorola in January 2000 when General Instrument Corporation — where he had served as chairman, president and CEO — merged with Motorola. After the merger, Breen became the executive vice president of Motorola and president of Motorola's Broadband Communications sector, where he succeeded in quickly integrating the two companies' cable businesses. He subsequently headed the company's Networks sector. Breen was named Motorola president and chief operating officer-elect in October 2001, and assumed the role of president and chief operating officer in January 2002.

As chairman and CEO of General Instrument, Breen is credited with making the cable-equipment manufacturer the leader in the industry, with its cutting-edge digital set-top boxes and digital programming distribution services. Between 1994 and 1997, Breen was president of the Broadband Networks group for General Instrument, president of Eastern Operations for the Communications division, and served as executive vice president of Terrestrial Systems.

From 1988 to 1994, as senior vice president of sales, Breen was responsible for the terrestrial products worldwide sales organization. This included overseeing sales personnel and activities in the United States, Canada, Latin America, Europe and Asia Pacific. Breen originally joined General Instrument in 1978.

In December 1999, Breen was ranked one of the top fifteen of CableFAX magazine's 100 most influential people in cable. In 1998, Breen won the National Cable Television Association's Vanguard Award for high achievers in cable. He is a director of Comcast Corporation.

Breen is a graduate of Grove City College in Grove City, Pennsylvania, and holds a Bachelor of Science degree in business administration and economics.

He is married with three children and lives in New Hope, Pennsylvania.